What is a blended delivery program and where can I take it?

- The EMR blended program is offered at our Lac La Biche campus.
- Blended delivery means that there are multiple ways that the courses are delivered. All theory courses are taught online with instructors providing teaching sessions using Collaborate. These sessions are recorded so students have the ability to watch and listen to them repeatedly. Lab courses include face to face onsite lab weeks (you are required to attend onsite weeks at the Lac La Biche campus).
- There are 3 mandatory onsite weeks throughout program in addition to the placement course.

- Some written exams are scheduled during the onsite weeks and some exams will require proctoring/supervision at any Portage College Campus or an approved invigilator site when not at the Lac La Biche campus.
- Students are responsible for all costs associated with travel and lodging for onsite weeks and exam invigilation external to Portage College.

Is a blended program the same as an online distance program ?

No, distance means that all courses can be taken online without having to be on campus. Blended is just a way to say that we have more than one way that we offer our courses (face-to-face and Collaborate).

Can I work while taking the EMR program?

This is a full time program and students can expect to spend an average of 6-10 hours per course studying each week. It can be challenging to work and keep up with the requirements of a full time program.

Are there any placements?

There is an 80 hour placement course which includes patient contact in various settings.

All clinical placements require travel and students are responsible for all associated costs. Students are not guaranteed placements in their home/work communities and need to plan for the resources (expenses, child care, etc.) to travel and possibly live away from home during the placement.

Potential students should discuss funding options for placements (i.e. bursaries) with the student advisor.
